

Introduction

Chair of the Development Committee

Paul Hughes is an award winning TV executive and media consultant whose career has ranged from being the Managing Editor of ITV Westminster during the Blair years through to running the digital TV switchover for Scotland. He's advised some of the world's biggest companies on media strategy and most recently was the Head of Programmes for STV, Scotland's main commercial broadcaster.

Paul is married to the newsreader Rachel McTavish and spends his spare time reprimanding their twin sons, playing in bands and tending to his collection of over 40 musical instruments, most of which he admits to playing badly.
